Chapter Report

Brothers,

Again it is time for we, the undergrads, to inform you, the highly successful and overly generous alumni (did I mention powerful, and good-looking) of our continued existence in the ghetto of North Philly. While our surroundings remain depressed, the chapter continues to thrive and dominate fraternity life on campus.

The Spring pledge period yielded eight new brothers (only half of whom are believed to be brain damaged), who have been instrumental in putting the house at full capacity. These new probationary brothers will be filling the positions of not only those who won't be returning due to their revulsion to studying, but of several lucky individuals who did indeed slip through the Temple red tape to graduate.

If you are in search of enthusiastic young talent, here is a short bio of this year's unfortunate lot who must face the Clinton job market and join the ranks of the alums:

Darren "Hermit Crab" Rabinowitz followed in the footsteps of his real life big brother, Stu, graduating with a major in finance. He is currently in the business of debt collections (we could use a guy like the crab).

Walter Morris, now divorced from his former roommate, Hermit Crab, graduated with honors in Poli Sci and is looking toward grad school. Though painful, the split has apparently done him good.

Andrew "Cobner" Lackman, whose talents as anchorman in chug contests will be sorely missed, has relocated to Pittsburgh where he seeks to use his Business degree with the same luck that he used his beer pong paddle.

Scott Wright, who has single-handedly confused more individuals than the new math, will be taking his degree in Rhetoric and Communications to the real world. Rumor has it that he has made the world of mortgage banking even less comprehensible, working under his classmate Joe Wargo.

PA Alpha Delta has gained considerable favor with the International office of late. After successfully hosting the Regional Conclave from February 19-21, our chapter was spoken highly of by Alan Wunsch. He additionally hinted that refinancing for house renovation was closer to becoming a reality. International further recognized the individual dedication of former Rex Paul Lucas and myself with Certificates of Merit at Convention.

So here are the taken for granted non-entities. Though you are probably tired of hearing year after year about our athletic prowess, yet again we have captured the All University Conference cup for intramural sports (the fifth time in six years). Parties are still on Thursday nights, and of course, Ted Chase, the dysfunctional greek advisor, is still about as unpleasant as a scathing rash.

With all this in mind, it is easy to liken the strength of the chapter with that of the alumni organization. A strong and supportive alumni group is an integral part of any fraternity. As undergrads we applaud your Kovner Association, and look forward to staying involved as our school years pass. We hope to see the link between the chapter and the alums strengthen through the collective efforts of both bodies.

Fraternally,
Mick Edelman, Rex

Kovner Banquet to be Held at Diamond Club

Five years... that is how long we have managed to keep the Kovner Banquet in the civil surroundings of the prestigious Vesper Club. Five years without so much as a disturbing the peace, public drunkenness, or indecent exposure charge (well, none that resulted in conviction).

This year we hope to continue this tradition at a new location, Temple's own Diamond Club. The move was motivated by our desire to significantly lower the cost without reducing our standards.

The banquet will be held on Saturday, November 13th at 7:00 p.m. But that's not all. We plan to kick off the day with the 3rd annual alumni vs. undergrad flag football game in the tradition of the first ugly, smash-face bout in '91.

We sincerely hope that the reduced cost, new location and day, proximity to the chapter house, and advance notice will result in a good turnout this year. Formal invitations are forthcoming, but please spread the word.

The Carriage House Becomes a Liability

The carriage house, once dilapidated and dangerously close to total collapse, is now officially falling down. Condemned by the City of Philadelphia in the early 1980s, the carriage house has been a conduit of evil in the neighborhood. It had served as a home to many a wayward vagrant until it was sealed with cement blocks in 1988, and its loose bricks continue to be used on a regular basis as devices that provide instant access to automobiles parked on Norris Street.

The structure has been a source of much controversy and concern over the past few years. Designed in grandiose fashion with the intent to store and maintain the horse and carriage of the inhabitants of the John Stafford mansion (the current chapter house), the carriage house has fallen in a state of total disrepair over many years of neglect. Even those items which made the carriage house an architectural work of art—the China brick, sculpted horse heads, and the Strawbridge crest—have been pillaged over the years (the massive crest was stolen from the second story of the structure in January).

The most recent and severe incident that needs the immediate attention of the alumni, the chapter, the international office, and the housing commission is the collapse of an entire section of second story wall approximately 10 ft. x 15 ft. in dimension. Fortunately for the chapter the wall fell into the lot of our neighboring fraternity and not onto the street or a passerby.

At this point, the carriage house is one thing—a liability. It is a danger to the community, and it endangers the security of the chapter. It needs to come down. Suggestions in the area of demolitions have ranged from an alumni razing with kegs and sledgehammers to letting John McKeon '86 “belly-buck” the structure to the ground. But a more legitimate method, one that will be acceptable to International and the Housing Commission (headed by our own Jerome Balka '49), must be devised.

This matter has been championed by our alumni in the past (Dave Vender '86), and has now found a new urgency. Any input that you may have, or pressure that you can place in the proper areas would be greatly appreciated.

Scholarship Fund to Honor Memory of Isadore Wachs

“Not Four Years, but a Lifetime.”

These words oft spoken by brothers young and old have great meaning to all. But in the history of Pi Lambda Phi, no man has lived by our credo more than the late Isadore “Is” Wachs.

Is dedicated himself to a number of worthy causes, and our chapter was fortunate enough to be a recipient of his unconditional caring, wisdom and leadership. His special dedication and love of Pi Lam was an outgrowth of eight decades of commitment to the ideals of Pi Lambda Phi.

Although not a Temple graduate, Is always had a special tie to Alpha Delta, serving as its chapter advisor for many years. He said that Temple brothers had consistently been a responsible group, always meeting obligations and realizing expectations, probably because—the Alpha Delta boys came from “upbringings where you had to work hard and understand the meaning of a dollar.”

Is was in his forties when Koko Kovner was a leader in the fraternity. They were men with high values and ideals, and were in constant correspondence while “Koke” was overseas fighting in World War II. Is remembered Kovner as a man “full of fun, and good humor,” but he added, “Koke would fight like hell against anything that jeopardized the chapter. The great thing in his life was the fraternity and the brothers.”

At the 1988 Kovner Banquet, Is Wachs graciously accepted the chapter’s first Lifetime Achievement award, but deferred the accolades to Koko and the many brothers who continued to pass the Kovner ideal on to new brothers.

Distinguished Alpha Delta alumni remember Is as an “advisor and confessor dedicated to fraternalism, and instrumental in the formation of the chapter” and as “a fine individual who gave of his time and of himself to touch a lot of lives.”

In his honor, the Temple chapter of Pi Lambda Phi will be instituting the Isadore Wachs Memorial Scholarship Fund to be awarded to an undergraduate who most typifies the qualities of the man to whom it is dedicated. Brother Bill Glosser '51 has graciously agreed to be the executor of such a fund. Any contributions can be sent to William Glosser, United States Magistrate, U. S. District Court, Western District of Pennsylvania, 430 Main Street, Johnstown, PA 15901.

Thanks to Bill Glosser, Marvin Welsch, and Rob Kwortnik for your contribution to this article.

The Carriage House, whose architecture serves as a symbol of a different era in North Philadelphia, is near collapse.

UPDATE

L.A. Stories

A handful of Pi Lams in search of fame, fortune, and girls who don't have South Jersey accents have settled in Los Angeles—land of silicon beauty and lousy cheesesteaks. None of the brothers will admit to fleeing the East to escape the law or a big-hipped fiancée. In fact, each alum claims to be doing something relatively productive in California. Of course, they're probably lying.

Bob "Sporty" Hoch '87 arrived in L.A. just in time for the riots of '92. Bob was typically unfazed, saying that his four years in North Philly made the riots seem like a weenie roast. Contrary to rumor, Bob did not travel west to be reunited with his Philly roommate, Rob Kwornik, though the two spend an inordinate amount of time together—mostly having no luck with California women (though they'll tell you different). Bob actually received a promotion within Mattel Toys' merchandising and promotions division. He denies having lurid fantasies about life-sized Barbies.

Sean "4-in-one-night" Dunn '84 is a Temple RTF grad who is actually using his degree as a filmmaker. Sean recently founded Octus Productions, for whom he directs and produces. Among Sean's credits are several music videos, a documentary film about expatriate Americans in Guatemala, and the L.A. Raiderettes Calendar Video. He's also currently developing a cable TV production entitled "Acoustic Underground," a project for ESPN called "Women in Sports Weekend," and his own screenplay. Sean denies having lurid fantasies about the Raiderettes, claiming the cheerleaders all fantasize about him...after all, he was Rex.

Bobby Spelger, Esq. '86 graduated from Southwestern University Law School, nailed the California Bar exam in his first go-around, and currently practices with a small L.A. firm. When not in court, Bobby can be found surfing (which is usually where his clients have to find him). He denies being an attorney, fearing the deluge of requests for gratis legal advice from Pi Lams having minor squabbles with the judicial system.

Rob "Bubbles" Kwornik '87, former chapter advisor, threw his M.B.A. studies and his marketing career into the can, and now claims to be a working actor, complete with an agent and membership in the Screen Actors Guild (though you won't find his name on the credit reels, for reasons unknown he's adopted the screen pseudonym, Bruce Beck). In addition, Rob recently wrote and optioned his first feature film script entitled "Deep Dive" (it's about ocean diving, you slobs), and also serves as Business and Marketing Manager for a film studio. To make extra money, Rob sings tunes at Venice Beach where, he says, "Jolly Laddies" is a big crowd pleaser. Rob denies ever having appeared in a movie called "Farm Boys and Their Barnyard Friends," directed by Sean Dunn.

Tim Noll '91 is the most recent Pi Lam to toss reason to the wind and move to L.A. Tim dragged his fiancée from her safe and secure life so he could try his hand at script writing. Like most L.A. artists, Tim makes his real living through other pursuits including insurance sales and mobile disc jockeying (the Good Bands People?). Tim denies everything saying it was all just a fraternity prank.

Not Four Wins, But a Lifetime...

THE BIG EAST

"It's Possible."

That's the motto adopted by the Temple Owls football team this year. It finished just ahead of "Yeah, Right," and "Just wait 'til basketball season" in the polls.

In the shadows of a 1-10 season, the good news is that we lost 29 lettermen... the bad news is that even for a Temple game it costs $4.50 for a dixie cup of beer at the Vet.

This year's goals may be a bit lofty for a team whose greatest show of offense resulted not from their passing attack, but their refusal to shower until they won two games. But, all is not grim. Temple spent its first full season as a part of the newly formed Big East Conference which includes such national powerhouses as Miami, Syracuse and Boston College. The Owls new head coach, Ron Dickerson, is one of only three black head coaches of Division 1-A football. His most recent in a string of successes in assistant coaching was as Defensive Coordinator with Clemson.

Pi Lam's own contribution to the football program, kicker Rich Maston (#47), went 4 for 6 after winning the starting job last season. This season in his first showing against Eastern Michigan he kicked a career best 47-yarder, the Owls' longest three-pointer in two years. As long as the offense can get him into field goal range, he seems destined for a great season.

Brother Spence and Brothers...

A long time goal of the fraternity — a perennial alumni association — has at last become a reality. The Kovner Association was formed by a core group of alumni early this Spring and will become chartered by the international office in September.

Meetings are tentatively held on the first Monday of every other month at 7:30 at the Diamond Club (the next one is Tuesday, October 19th—we know it's not a Monday). Topics of this meeting will include the Kovner Banquet and the Is Wachs Memorial Scholarship Fund. If you are interested in attending please contact Kevin Dwyer (609-875-5627 home; 215-204-6623 work).

One of the first orders of business was the election of pro tem officers and a familiar name happened to come up—Spencer Glass. Since getting out of puppy sales, and moving on to home rentals, Spencer insisted that he needed some other small, troublesome pets to take care of, so we unanimously elected him President of the Kovner Association. Below is his first address to the little people:

Dear Brothers:

On Monday, May 3rd, I found myself being summoned down to Temple University's Diamond Club. The mission...to seek out strange new worlds and civilizations. On Temple's campus everything is strange...and you know about the civilization.

What I did find, however, was a group of bright young alums who are looking to go where no Pi Lam has gone before. The goal: to form Alpha Delta's first truly bona fide Alumni Organization, something I always wished I could get going, but couldn't do on my own.

Organized by Co-Chapter Advisors, Kevin Dwyer and Shawn Mahoney, the meeting was attended by Mike Naegele, Ron Savarese, Shawn Battle, Steve Smith and others who discussed the initial goals of the organization.

At this time I was asked to serve as President of the Association's initial term, and I humbly (Okay, Murray, I was thrilled) accepted the position. Should I be unable to fulfill my obligations as President (like if a nude layout of me were to unexpectedly surface in a Blue Boy magazine), my duties will be assumed by Vice-president Ron Savarese. We gave him a test. He can spell p-o-t-a-t-o. The Treasurer and Secretary are Kevin Dwyer and Shawn Mahoney, respectively.

Basically, our initial goals are three-fold.

1. Formalize the Alumni Organization
2. Establish fund-raising and alumni events
3. Establish a scholarship in the honor Isadore Wachs

To formalize our association we needed fifteen members. We have already surpassed this level, but we encourage all to join. Everyone is aware that an organization such as this can't operate on good intentions alone. Funding is required for the simplest of things including this mailing. We are in need of not just your donation, but your efforts and your enthusiasm, to make this venture successful. Interested brothers can send a check payable to the Kovner Association in the amount of $10.00. We'll add you to the rolls. Send membership dues to Kevin Dwyer, 55 Dover Court, Turnersville, NJ 08012.

The generosity of Pi Lams never ceases to amaze me, especially when references of my tenure as Rex are involved. We are, in fact, counting on this generosity to get the Kovner Association off the ground and stretch our capabilities and resources to benefit the undergrads in their ventures (specifically house renovation, scholarship funds, etc.).

Any amount that you can afford will be greatly appreciated, but we are offering a special deal to those who can pledge $100.00. What do you get? Hmmm, let's see. Your $100 donation will get you a specially designed Century Club T-shirt, instant membership into the alumni association, and to-be-named discounts at alumni sponsored events. Not a bad deal, ay!

If you would like to be a member of this prestigious group, please send your check to Kevin Dwyer at the above address or Shawn Mahoney. But please don't let this figure scare you away, any gift is appreciated and will be put to good use.

We are all eager to see this venture fly. I hope you do too. Stay tuned for further news and events.

Temple vs. Army...Homecoming...Tailgate... Big Upset?

Upset... That is what brothers have said that they will be if there are once again no festivities for Temple Homecoming.

But fear not, this year the undergrads will be throwing one of their world famous tailgates on Saturday, October 9th, and the Kovner Association will be attaining a block of tickets for the game.

Be sure to join us for the pre-game activities featuring warm beer (Milwaukee's Beast since the Schlitz plant closed down), grilled grade "x" turkey dogs and 2 oz. burgers (pre-cooked weight), asphalt volleyball, and football irreverence.

Tickets can be obtained for a mere $10 each. Contact Ronnie Savarese (215-546-5205 home; 609-339-7174 work) to reserve seats.

A Message of Little Worth from Your Chapter Advisor

Well, here it is, your long awaited, 6-page expanded format newsletter. Due to the abundance of fraternity happenings (and my overly verbose writing style), we needed to add a couple of pages. Unfortunately, even the "Color your favorite Pi Lam from the Seventies" section requested by Alan Josel and classmates at the last Kovner Banquet could not be included due to space restrictions and the extra charge of shipping the non-toxic crayons. But seriously, the responsibilities of my new position at work, my duties as Co-chapter advisor and my rigorous drinking schedule, have all kept me quite busy. Kevin Dwyer and I would like to ask for your help in reaching some of the goals that we have set for the chapter and the Kovner Association. We'd like to thank all of those who have volunteered their services already, and remind any charity-minded individuals that they may contact Kevin at home (215-546-5205) or at work (215-651-5033) or myself (Phone # on page 6) to relieve that guilty feeling that may have suddenly overwhelmed you. -- Shun

Milestones:

Joe McGee '90 has returned to the Philadelphia area after an extended tour with the U.S. Navy. Said Joe of the move, "I've been thrown out of bars from Seattle to Silesia, but its just not the same as being heaved out on my keester right here at home."

Tim "Not Four Years, but a Lifetime" Jonassen (?) purported to have pledged sometime early in the Reagan era, has successfully completed his fifth consecutive semester as a sophomore. Tim, always the optimist, believes that a few more semesters with his nose to the grindstone ought to have him in cap and gown by '96.

Our own Kevin Dwyer '87, long time chapter advisor, was married in August of 1992 to Kristine Engkvist (who listed her primary reason for marriage to be reducing the number of consecutive consonants in her name). Additionally, Kevin's exceptional dedication to the chapter was recognized by International with a Certificate of Merit presented at this year's Convention in Miami.

Don Serek '90 tied the knot with college sweetheart Peg. Brothers in attendance at the reception recalled a touching moment when Don (a few laundry loads past three sheets to the wind) put the father of the bride in a headlock, and repeatedly wrapped upon his forehead saying, "can I call you Dad now, Chief?"

Stu Rabinowitz '90 will be married in October to Amy Stief. While the wedding promises to be a cataclysmic joining of religions and races, everyone is looking forward to the buffet.

Larry Goldman '87 recently opened Joclyn's Barbershop at the Barclay Square Shopping Center in Upper Darby. But you'd be more likely to get gin and tonic than hair tonic on the premises (you see it's really a bar). Larry said he got the idea for the name from all the times he woke up in the morning with a hangover and felt the need to shave his tongue.

Alan Markowitz '79 was recently named a partner in the accounting firm J.H. Cohn & Co. (it was either that or give him his own office). Alan has also found his way to becoming an Endowment Fund Trustee.

Trey Reynolds has lucked into becoming a member of a celebrity family with his recent marriage to Licia Bono. But don't be banging down his door asking him for nude pictures of Cher (or Sonny for that matter); his newly acquired brother-in-law is San Francisco 49er QB, Steve Bono.

Andrew Parr '78 is the director of a Navy Liaison Unit in Norfolk, Virginia (but vehemently denies any involvement in the recent "tailhook" scandal). He asks of classmate Wesley Burton the enigmatic question, "have you made any Colombian style spaghetti lately?" Andrew believes that an annual Frank Rizzo Remembrance Day complete with complimentary police brutality for all participating locals would be an appropriate ongoing alumni sponsored event.

The distinguished recipient of the first Jerome R. Balka Award, David "Lumpy" Vender '87, has been selling commercial real estate in Manayunk, PA (yo). But he maintains that this has been a mere distraction from his true passion—children's books. Look for his first publication, Flakey: The Clown with a Real Bad Skin Condition in a book store near you.

Brian Rittenhouse '79, an Acoustic Engineer (huh?) at the Naval Air Warfare Center, was quite disappointed that a pet project of his, the dreaded nude bomb, was not used by the Pentagon in the recent Gulf War due to the fear that our forces would be disgusted by the abundance of back hair on the Iraqi troops. Brian says he holds no malice towards the Navy brass nor his Pi Lam classmates whom he affectionately referred to as, "a bunch of schmoes!"

Bill Glosser '51, a U.S. Magistrate in Johnstown, PA reminds us that nothing has changed since they sat on orange crates and listened to long-winded chapter officers babble on ad infinitum at Monday meetings. He questioned whether Marvin Welsch was getting a commission on the Kovner Dinner at the Vesper Club. And as much as we'd like to pass the blame on to him, we have to admit that it was the short-sighted investment of the chapter advisors into the Committee to Re-Elect the Former Frank Rizzo, that required the excess funds.

Brother Glosser would also like to send a message to the undergrads not to despair about total incomprehension of your career field of choice. Apparently, his classmate Robert Rosenthal '51 failed three consecutive semesters of finance, and yet now runs a multi-million dollar car dealership in Washington D.C. So much for academics.

Mike "Colonel" Sautters '92 has been demoted from his unofficial civilian ranking to a Lance Corporal in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves. Full time, however, he manages an MAB Paints store in Virginia and now refers to anything north of the Mason-Dixon line as "Canada." Mike has assimilated nicely into his new down-south surroundings by taking up the banjo, and getting to know his cousins more intimately.

Burke Miller '90 is in the employ of L.D. Caulk/Dentsply selling dental implements and currently resides in Spring Mountain, PA. He would like to see the Kovner Club organize outings for graduated pledge classes to meet at the house and journey into the crime-ridden inner city for a night of adventure. Burke additionally voiced concern for pledge brother Stu "Turtle" Rabinowitz saying, "Stu has relocated from VA to PA and is stuck somewhere in between on his exterior back shell." Not to worry Burke, we've informed the proper authorities at the zoo.

Dan Lynch '69 whose career as an editor began with the rush booklet, Pi Lam, Join Us or We'll Smack You, is now the Managing News Editor for the Times Union in Albany, NY. His input regarding out-of-town alumni lead us to change Kovner from a Friday to a Saturday. We hope this will oblige your desire to return to the banquet "to torture (Arnold) Dranoff and (Alan) Josel."

Calculated idiocy (i.e. stand-up comedy) is the business of Chris Gannon '89, who has appeared at New York clubs such as the Improv and the Comic Strip. He based his routine on his days at Pi Lam. Said Gannon, "yeah, those jokes about boogers and flatulence never fail." He's still got a face for radio though, and in fact, you may have heard him in the New York area as the "Shady Brook Farms Turkey Guy."

Michael "Rubble" Mollen '91 was so impressed with the last newsletter that he sent an $18 donation. Being an accountant at BCH Securities, I assumed that he would work in round numbers, but he informed me (being the goy that I am) that it means "chai" or good luck and good life that he wishes for Pi Lambda Phi and the newsletter. Thanks, Rubble.

John Lampi '69 is in Banking/Securities Law at the firm of Schnader, Harrison, Segal & Lewis in Mechanicsburg, PA. A Temple Law grad, he teaches at Dickenson Law School in his spare time. Due to his standing in the legal community, we choose not to direct any potentially libelous comments towards Brother Lampi here.

Steve Smith '89 is fund-raising for the Police Athletic League, and his move to work with a police-related charity has been highly regarded by his parole officer. Steve, a fine armchair quarterback in his day, fondly remembers his days as Alternate Athletic Director and says that in regular PAL sporting events (for ages 8 to 12) he hardly ever gets picked last.
